BROKEN TAPE RECORDER STOLEN

Only one night of the easa 2004 did it take before the first car had been broken into. The left side window had been broken and the car radio had been taken. This was the sad sight that slovenien participant Jera saw when she went to her car today. The only comment that the french easa security organizer had on the situation was "welcome to Roubaix". TODAYS BAGUETTE; nice taste but... we need more than t pieces of cheese to be convinced that it was a real meal! Well at least it was unexpectable big, so we are satisfied! Size really matters! And who ate the last melon?

ROUBAIX, by one of our reporters
Last night football match PARAPLU reporters have wittnesed the first EASA injury.

Subject was Toni, NC from Spain who broke his finger during a daring attempt to defend his goal with his life, against a raging drunk crowd. The only problem was, he used his hand for this purpose, not giving thought to the consequences, with only his team on his mind. PARAPLU researchers will conduct further investigation to keep our readers informed.

We found the hero laying down in hospital in Lille where he decided to some moments with us for some more insight in this tragic event...

U: Can you tell us how did it happen?

T: I can't recall

U: How do you feel after this enormous incident?

T: Ok

U: Do you always sacrifice yourself this much when playing football?

T: Yes

U: Is it true that you are

EASA WEATHER!

Tomorrow's weather will proof to be a considerable improvement on today's. Sun cream will proof to be lifesaving, and wearing a hat a must. Watch out for sunstroked birds falling from the sky. DRINK ADVICE: ANYTHING COLD AND LIQUID

CAR THIEVES A JOKE

Only thing stolen from the car was an old car radio with a taperecorder that didn't even work anymore. How happy the thieves must have been after coming home with there big "scoop" of the night. Luckily the car was insured and the damage of the car should be repaired and paid for before the returntrip from easa.

Rumours say that also another car has been visited by car thieves. It was the car of german NC Jost. But the thieves did not have any luck with this car and had not gotten into it. So be careful out there all car owners. And remember to ask the organizers about the 50 safe carpark places that they say they will get for the participants soon.

PARANORMAL?

YESTERDAY'S EASA EXPERIENCE

It's the guy from last night... had a performance wondering if he's gay or bragging how many tasty people he kissed... Let's have some more ;-))))) And the karaoke, shouldn't the booze be cheaper, so archi-people might sing along. But later as the music started and the karaoke stopped, was it a dance we saw? Didn't it last too long for us primary school kids? Then checking the ILOVERBX pack, organizers shouldn't have spared on those ear plugs, cause haven't you experienced the chicken noise in the morning... And we like the food. And the cook babe.

DANGEROUS MEETING IVONA AND TONI (AGAIN!) UNDER ATTACK

Yesterday a gathering of NCs took place. Anonymous sources within the NC community tell us...

that the meeting was pretty uneventful, not to say boring, all the talk being just about workshops. But then, to add a little flavour to the event, two individuals from the lower part of the food-chain decided to take action. In that very instant the Croatian and Spanish NCs (Ivona & Toni) got struck by an unknown amount of pigeon excrement. Although this might have caused eruptions of laughter, it seems that the incident went fairly unnoticed. Obviously, pigeons don't like trespassers, so if you, walking carelessly around EASA, find yourself in a space with multi-coloured bricks around - stay low, its pigeon territory.

going to be the new Raul?
T: Who?
U: The striker of Real Madrid?
T: No
U: Why?
T: Because
U: Thank you for your time

Toni seemed a bit tired and for the sake of Toni's recovery, the Paraplu reporters decided to leave Toni in peace. The editors wish Toni more fortunate EASAn-ight in the future and can only praise this heroic act of selfdenial...

EASA HITTING OFF!

New arrivals pour in continuously to make up a stunning total of 354 architecture students this year. (last count: yesterday night) Still 50 students are missing, so French organisation might tip over some scaffolding to look for hidden participants. So if you notice any suspicious human movements, check the tags and if necessary: report to Jebrôme. Participants of no less than 41 countries have been welcomed, ranging from Iceland to Oekrain. Actually, Oekrian has been a 'lost country' for several years now, but has made its comeback, together with Russia and Czech Republic. Happy as we are with the new, we're sad to lose Slovakia and Portugal (unconfirmed sources mentioned a relationship with the loss of the eurocup and a resulting hangover) Even exotic representatives from Central America can be found: students from Nicaragua, Panama, San Salvador, Equador. Bertrand and Agnes were assigned to the honourable task of identifying all incoming Easians. Some annoyance has been reported, cueing up for a tag, after (some) having travelled half the globe, but eventually all nuisances disappeared. French logistics provide a daily 500 baquettes, a container full with fromage and truck-loads of vin rouge to keep the EASAbellies satisfied.

DAILY EASA FASHION ANALYSIS

A NEW BEGINNING?

trend to try

When Madonna released her song Vogue with her famous strike the pose, she must had had some EASA experience. Or is this just the coincidence?

There are, of course, many easa fashion issues to be worried about. Every year this pan-european gathering brings different fashion challenges. To be noticed, to show your cultural back-

Even though Europe is still very often seen as an abstract, technocratic, over-regulated and not understandable ghosts that floats above us, young architects decided to make their own statement by not wearing BLACK anymore. This year's easa catwalk is inspired by colours and patterns, different textile structure and experimental fabrics.

From basic friendly used cotton to aggressive polyester. Even more, if you'll have a closer look, you'll notice that some gather in smaller thematic groups.

Such as: mechanics (left-overs from Sunday's Hockenheim F1 race), soldiers from Vietnam (European)...they even started the cloning process... Acting sustainable and ecological, as a result of last year theme, some might even appear nude with some plants hiding the IT. This would show their awareness of the easa importance.

So watch out, making a new statement with your image could affect easa society and theme.

In many young politicians started a campaign "Give Europe a Face". They wanted to achieve Europe would become more catchy and visible. Their statement was that Europe is more than an anonymous decision making power. Our movement went even further. Why? To deliver the basic answer: there is no need to write long analysis, though.

Just get the look!

The eye

ground or even to show how much work you have recently done - amount of dirt. Some even reflect identity crisis, based on a rough childhood or hard political and economical status. It's Europe that has it all. Where do you fit?

How the French stay slim

The French may eat a lot of cheese, but most manage to stay slim. As Britain and other countries in Europe worry about ever-growing levels of obesity among adults and children, could we learn something from our neighbours, the French? French cuisine is made up of very small portion sizes, so even if we serve you seven courses, you won't feel bloated

France cancels first gay wedding

The issue has ignited a fierce debate in France. France's first gay marriage, which was conducted last month by a local mayor, has been annulled by a court. The tribunal in Bordeaux declared the marriage of Stephane Chapin and Bertrand Charpentier "null and void". The mayor, Noel Mamere of the Green Party, was suspended for a month after defying government warnings that he would be breaking the law when he wed the two men in the town of Begles.
